Negro Watchman Is Under Arrest on Suspicion—Police Believe That She Was Murdered by Three Young Courtois, Assaulted Despite Her Vigorous Struggles, and Then Killed to Stun Her Lipt.

While mother and father speedily waited her return home late Saturday night, pretty Lillian Phagan lay dead in a blood-stained bed at 112 South Peachtree street, the victim of an atrocious murder. The police believe the criminal act was a robbery.

Her skull shattered, her neck horribly bruised where she was choked to death, the body was found at a street cleaning crew, several hours after the fatal blow and was arrested until the assault.

With grief in his heart he was imprisoned the three young Courtois. A confession from him is expected to lead to the guilty.

MEN SINGING IN SILENT NIGHT

No one ever heard the like of it. The voices of the men of Atlanta were heard from the ends of the earth.

The Voice of the Master in Silent Night

Caruso, the great tenor, led the carol with a voice that was heard in every corner of the city, and the people sang in return with a joyous spirit.
